PHILOSOPHY

Dr. Gill's personal philosophy is, at its core, to do unto others as you would have done unto yourself. He is committed to serving others and adding value during each and every interaction. As a physician, he treats his patients as he would have a close family member be treated. This requires that accurate diagnoses and treatment plans are devised, that such plans are executed with precision, and that such plans are communicated with empathy and clarity to patients and their family members. Dr. Gill is a strong proponent of fitness, vitality, and healthy nutrition in order to live life at its greatest potential. He believes in feeding the mind, body, and soul with the best possible sources of "fuel" available at all times. He incorporates this philosophy into his patient care, research, product development, and peri-operative planning. Dr. Gill recognizes the unique needs and values of every patient to devise treatment plans that will add maximum value to enhance their health and quality of life.
